

Modern Identity Management

Modern IT systems are very complex and depend on a large amount of data. The most basic data are the characteristics of identity. They regulate authorizations, the representation of interfaces and much more. It is a big challenge to regulate the data flow of different systems, such as Active Directories, HR systems, etc.. All these systems are based on identity data for different functions and exactly these must always be kept up to date.

With this Consulting-in-a-Box offer, you can benefit from the many years of experience of our consultants. In various sizes and complexities, our experts design a highly networked infrastructure and present ways in which this important data can be directed and controlled.
